MAN MURDERS GIRL HE LOVES: TRIES SUICIDE

Jos. Paolucci Made Desperate by Brooding Over Unrequited Affections.

ELIZABETH DODGE DIES INSTANTLY

Her Slayer at Casualty Hospital With Bullet in His Side, Inflicted by Own Hand.

Made desperate by brooding over an unrequited love affair, Joseph Paolucci, thirty years old, an Italian shoemaker, living at 1816 Fifth street northwest, shot and instantly killed Elizabeth V. Dodge, seventeen years old, of 437 Fifth street northeast, on the sidewalk, almost in front of her own home. After killing the girl, Paolucci turned the gun on himself, inflicting a danger ous wound in his right side.

Doctors at the Casualty Hospital, where he was taken immediately after the shooting, stated today that although the wound is a serious one, they feel certain he will

Was Apparently Happy.

All day yesterday Paolucci walked up and down in front of the girl's home. Several times he entered the little store conducted by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Dodge, and purchased soda water, candy, and other confections. Apparently he was in the best of spirits. He treated his friends on different occasions and joked with persons in the store. Not once did he ask for the girl, whose life he had planned to take, but Mrs. Dodge knew he was waiting to see her.
